This is my friend's pet cat that I take care of from time to time, Aya-chan (female). She's freeloading off of me, but she has a bigger attitude than my cat, so I'm revealing to the entire country an embarrassing picture of her being cornered after having stolen some food. Aahh, I feel better.

Honorifics Explained

In this manga book, you will find Japanese honorifics left intact in the translations. For those not familiar with how the Japanese use honorifics and, more important, how they differ from American honorifics, we present this brief overview.

Politeness has always been a critical facet of Japanese culture. Ever since the feudal era, when Japan was a highly stratified society, use of honorifics—which can be defined as polite speech that indicates relationship or status—has played an essential role in the Japanese language. When addressing someone in Japanese, an honorific usually takes the form of a suffix attached to one's name (example: "Asuna-san"), is used as a title at the end of one's name, or appears in place of the name itself (example: "Negi-sensei," or simply "Sensei!").

Honorifics can be expressions of respect or endearment. In the context of manga and anime, honorifics give insight into the nature of the relationship between characters. Many English translations leave out these important honorifics and therefore distort the feel of the original Japanese. Because Japanese honorifics contain nuances that English honorifics lack, it is our policy not to translate them. Here, instead, is a guide to some of the honorifics you may encounter in our manga.

-san: This is the most common honorific and is equivalent to Mr., Miss, Ms., Mrs. It is the all-purpose honorific and can be used in any situation where politeness is required.

-sama: This is one level higher than "-san" and is used to confer great respect.

-dono: This comes from the word "tono," which means "lord." It is an even higher level than "-sama" and confers utmost respect.

-kun: This suffix is used at the end of boys' names to express familiarity or endearment. It is also sometimes used by men among friends, or when addressing someone younger or of a lower station.

-chan: This is used to express endearment, mostly toward girls. It is also used for little boys, pets, and even among lovers. It gives a sense of childish cuteness.

Bozu: This is an informal way to refer to a boy, similar to the English terms "kid" and "squirt."

Sempai/Senpai: This title suggests that the addressee is one's senior in a group or organization. It is most often used in a school setting, where underclassmen refer to their upperclassmen as "sempai." It can also be used in the workplace, such as when a newer employee addresses an employee who has seniority in the company.

Kohai: This is the opposite of "sempai" and is used toward underclassmen in school or newcomers in the workplace. It connotes that the addressee is of a lower station.

Sensei: Literally meaning "one who has come before," this title is used for teachers, doctors, or masters of any profession or art.

-[blank]: This is usually forgotten in these lists, but it is perhaps the most significant difference between Japanese and English. The lack of honorific means that the speaker has permission to address the person in a very intimate way. Usually, only family, spouses, or very close friends have this kind of permission. Known as yobisute, it can be gratifying when someone who has earned the intimacy starts to call one by one's name without an honorific. But when that intimacy hasn't been earned, it can be very insulting.

Wow.
I'm so jealous. And they say the fish shop owner's wife got a library card.
Why is Izumi-sempai here?
It's one o'clock already.
Ah, Hana.
How long were you gonna sleep?
I've sent postcards, too, but they never pick mine.
I had a strong impression there was a foreign creature in the living room...

Izumi-sama ♡
He brought us some cream puffs. Thank him.
Don't speak to him that way.
I was in the neighborhood, so I stopped by.
Stop it, Hana. Leave some for your father and grandfather.
CHOMP

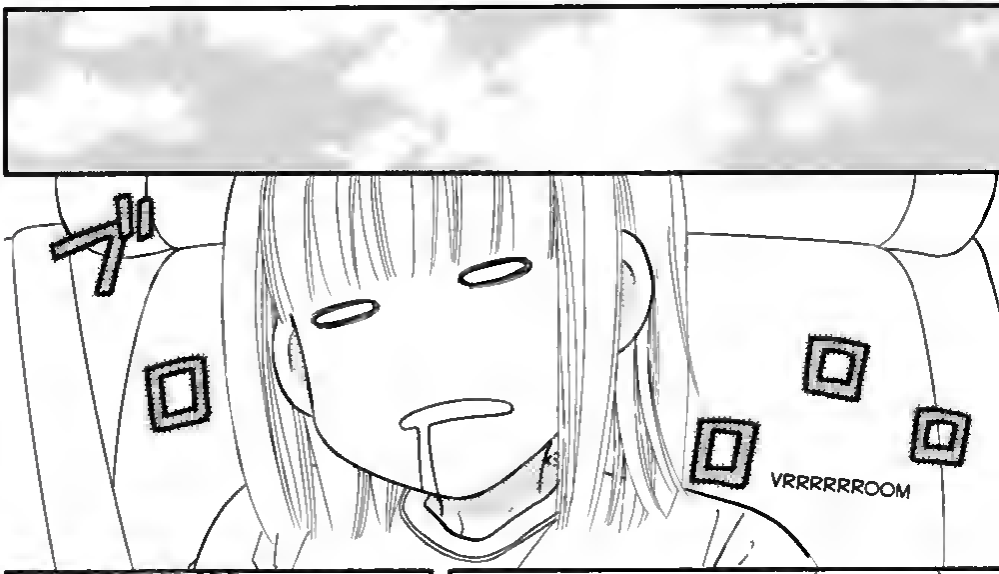
It's really just not a cream puff unless it's got a layer of custard and a layer of fresh cream.
Yum...!!
If you want more, why not come to my place?
Eh?
Aww—

I'll go ♡
Lucky...
If you come home with me, there'll be lots of stuff, not just cream puffs.
My cook made those cream puffs.



VRRRRRROOM

What is this? I could have kept sleeping.
You said we're here.
But the car's still going.

As usual, it just feels too good, riding in this car...
Uuuhhh...
Wake up, Hana. We're here.
ANBAN

Eh?
There, now you can see it. That's my house.
We are here. This is my yard.
.....!?

Y-Yard? This is all yours, Izumi-sempai!?
Yeah.
It's so big, you'd have to go to great lengths just to go to the convenience store!
It's not a safari park!

But on the other hand, she's so cute, you can't be completely cruel to her, can you?

Ugh...
If we don't get her to give up now, then she really will come to Japan and start training to be a bride.
Yeah, yeah!
You have to become convincing enough to make Tamako think all hope is lost.
This is no laughing matter, Hana-chan. Izumi's future depends on you.
What's with that attitude? It's like you don't even care!
Give back those cream puffs I gave you earlier!!

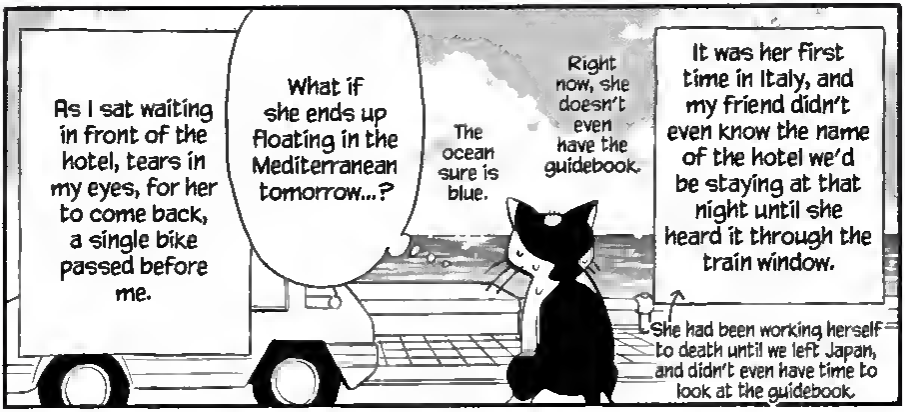
The Chinese are not to be taken lightly.
When I went back to Japan and told people about it, no one would believe me, but there had to have been at least 10 meters.
No! I'm positive it was 10 meters!!
It's true!!
Are you sure it wasn't just about two meters?
She's exaggerating.
There she goes again.



As I sat waiting in front of the hotel, tears in my eyes, for her to come back, a single bike passed before me.
What if she ends up floating in the Mediterranean tomorrow...?
The ocean sure is blue.
Right now, she doesn't even have the guidebook.
It was her first time in Italy, and my friend didn't even know the name of the hotel we'd be staying at that night until she heard it through the train window.
She had been working herself to death until we left Japan, and didn't even have time to look at the guidebook.

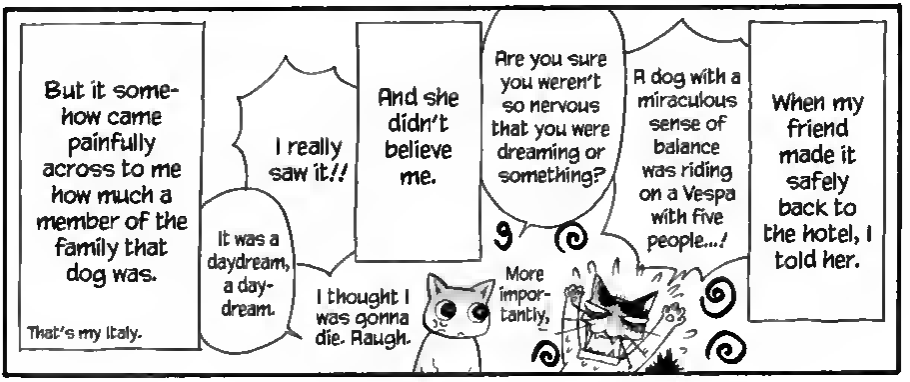
But it was the first time I'd seen a dog, so I was surprised.
He had a miraculous sense of balance, as if there wouldn't be the slightest tremor, even if the bike went on an angle with the curb.
He was standing on all four legs.
From having visited China and Italy, it was a little late for me to be surprised by seeing five or six people riding one bike.



But it somehow came painfully across to me how much a member of the family that dog was.
That's my Italy.
It was a daydream, a daydream.
I really saw it!!
I thought I was gonna die. Raugh.
And she didn't believe me.
Are you sure you weren't so nervous that you were dreaming or something?
More importantly,
A dog with a miraculous sense of balance was riding on a Vespa with five people...!
When my friend made it safely back to the hotel, I told her.

The End

Translation Notes

Japanese is a tricky language for most Westerners, and translation is often more art than science. For your edification and reading pleasure, here are notes on some of the places where we could have gone in a different direction in our translation of the work, or where a Japanese cultural reference is used.

Iriomote wildcat, page 6

An endangered wildcat that is found only on Iriomote Island, an island in the south of Japan.

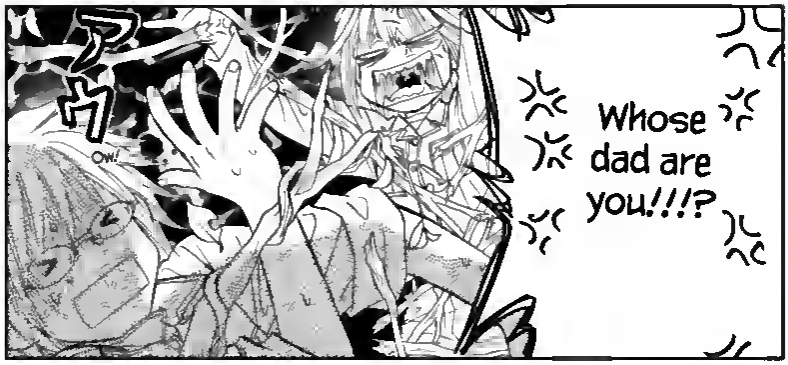
A type of biscuit made mostly of lard and flour, and a specialty of Okinawa.



Whose dad are you!!!? page 18

Fathers the world over love to make bad puns, and in Japan, such puns are referred to as "dad gags." So when Takashi makes a bad, not to mention mean, pun, Hana wants to know what gives him the right to make dad jokes.

Habu*, page 25

*Habu*s are pit vipers, venomous snakes found in southeast Asia.

Rafte* and goya champurû, page 35

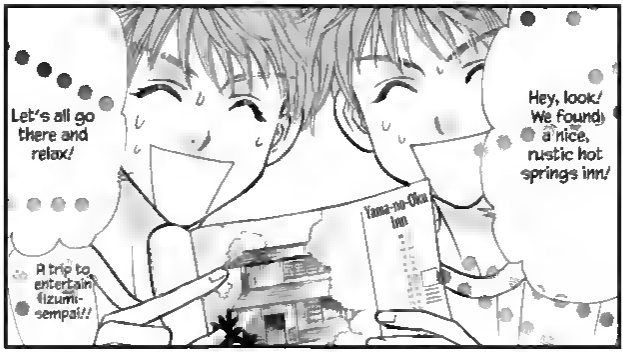
Rafte is a pork dish, consisting of slices of pork in a sweet brown sauce. Goya champurû is a champurû, or mixed stir-fry, made with goya, a kind of bitter melon grown in Okinawa.

I would be in the summer home, eating rafte or goya champurû about now.
...If Izumi-sempai hadn't gone off about Iriomote wildcats,



Yama-no-Oku Inn, page 46

Yama-no-oku means "deep in the mountains." It must be a very remote inn.

JARO, page 49

The Japan Advertising Review Organization (JARO) was created to protect consumers from false advertising and the like.

Sadako, page 52

Sadako is the name of the girl in the original Japanese version of The Ring.

Mino MoXta, page 86

The person Hana's mother is "not" referring to is probably Mino Monta, a well known TV personality in Japan, who not only hosts many TV shows, including the Japanese version of Who Wants to be a Millionaire?, but holds the record for most hours on live TV in a week.

What are you doing here!?
Izumi's second cousin, Tamako Satô.
The Bon Festival and New Year's ended long ago!!
That was mean! Why did you dodge!?
Who is this?
BANZAI
Ojou-sama.
WOOF WOOF

Ojou-sama, page 95

Ojou-sama is a respectful way of addressing someone of a higher social status, but lower age, than your own, especially the daughter of a family where one works as a maid, butler, etc.

Bon Festival and New Year's, page 95

In Japan, the two big family holidays are the Bon Festival and New Year's. The Bon Festival is a Buddhist festival to honor one's ancestors.

And I just had to see you, Cousin Izumi.
But I couldn't come to Japan during the Bon Festival or New Year's.
Both of her parents are half Japanese.
Tamako Satô..?

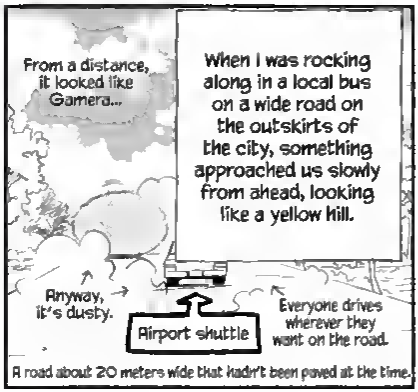
Tamako Satô...? page 96

Hana wonders why Tamako has a Japanese name, being so blonde.

One cleeeaaar—
Sing us a little something.
Oh, and the castanets and triangle.
The Pianica and the recorder?
Any musical instruments?

Pianica and recorder, page 115

In Japan, elementary school students all learn how to play the Pianica (combination piano and harmonica) and the recorder.



From a distance, it looked like Gamera...
When I was rocking along in a local bus on a wide road on the outskirts of the city, something approached us slowly from ahead, looking like a yellow hill.
Anyway, it's dusty.
Airport shuttle
Everyone drives wherever they want on the road.
A road about 20 meters wide that hadn't been paved at the time.

Gamera, page 166

Gamera is a character from a series of Japanese giant monster movies from the 1960s. Gamera is something like Godzilla—except that he's a gigantic bipedal turtle.
